CASES

Labour Relations: Court Refuses to Bar CUPW Workers from Engaging in Secondary Picketing

A global shipping and logistics company asked a court to issue an order barring striking Canadian Union of Postal Workers from setting up secondary picket lines at its building and vehicle depot near the Winnipeg airport, arguing that the picketing amounted to an illegal blockade of the vital facility which operates on a 24/7 basis and moves up to 50,000 packages per day. But the Manitoba court denied the injunction, finding that the picketers were exercising their Charter right to engage "in non-violent informational picketing and that "merely raising the spectre of some degree of delay over a two-and-one-half hour period on one day" didn't prove that the company would suffer "irreparable harm" [Purolator Inc. v. John Doe et al., 2024 MBKB 189 (CanLII), December 18, 2024].
